POETRY.

From the New Monthly Magazine. SONG.

Solve.

The plump Lady Tott to her husband one day Said, "Let us go driving this evening, I pray." (Lady Tott was an alderman's daughter.) "Well, where shall we go?" said Sir Tilbary Tott. "Why, my love," said my Lady, "the weather is hot, Sappose we drive round by the water,—

The water,—
Sappose we drive round by the water."

The dinner was ended, the clarret was "done,"
The knight getting up,—getting down was the sun,—
And my Lady agog for heart-slaughter;
When Sir Tibury, lazv, like cows after grains,
Said, "The weather is low'ring, my love; see, it rains—

Only look at the drops in the water,—

Only look at the drops in the water." Lady Tott, who, when earnestly fixed on a drive, Overcame all excuses Sir Til might contrive, Had her bonnet and parasol brought her: Says she, "Dear Sir Til, don't let me ask in vain; The dots in the pond which you take to be rain Are nothing but files in the water,—

The water.—

Are nothing but flies in the water."

Sir Tilbury saw that he could not escape;
So he put on his coat, with a three-doubled cape,
And then by the hand gently caught her;
And lifting her up to his high one-horse "shay,"
She settled her "things," and the pair drove away,
And skirted the edge of the water,—
The water.— And skirted the edge of the water.

Sir Til was quite right; on the top of his crown,
Like small shot in volleys, the rain peppered down—
Only small shot would do much more slaughter,—
Till the gay Lady Tott, who was getting quite wet,
Said, "My dear Sir T. T," in a kind of half pet,
"Turn back, for I'm drenched with rain-water,—
Rain-water,—
Turn back, for I'm drenched with rain-water."

"Oh dear Lady T.," said Til, winking his eye,

"You every thing know so much better than I,"
(For when angry, with kindness he fought her,)
"You may fancy this rain, as I did before;
But you showed me my folly;—'tis really no more Than the skimming of flies in the water,-The water,-The skimming of flies in the water."

He drove her about for an hour or two,

Till her Ladyship's clothes were completels soak'd through,
Then, home to Tott Cottage he brought her,
And saidy Kow, Lady T., by the joke of to-night,
Fill reign over yea; for you'll own that I'm right,
And know rain, Ma'am from flies in the water,—

Know rain, Ma'am, from flies in the water."

Forty years since, 'ere the schoolmaster was abroad,' some of the Bonifaces had strange notions of grammatical accuracy. This was glorious work for Dickeywho had (not unjustly) the reputation of being a learned clerk. He wrote an affiche for an innkeeper at Folkstone in these words:-"To Travellers.-Return chaises stop here going and coming.

Fortune's Freaks.—Where marriages are made, or how lightly and unthinkingly they are made, is no subject for me to dilate on; but such a step taken, or such a step avoided, has changed the current of a life too often. About 1790, or from that period until about 1793, a singer of the appropriate name of Goldfinch, (who is still living at an advanced age in Hull,) was manager of a small company in Yorkshire. The principal comic actress was Miss Harriet Mellon, now the immediate union. The lady subsequently got a superior engagement, and in season 1794-5 came to London, appearing, I believe, in the January of the latter year, as Lydia Languish. The rest of her "travels' history," the reader knows better than myself.

Consolation to Dramatists .- 'The Rivals,' 'Three Weeks after Marriage,' (then called 'What we must all come to,') 'Fontainbleau,' 'Castle of Andalusia,' (first called 'Banditti of the Forest,') 'Blue Devils,' and that subsequently successful extravaganza, 'Life in London,' were all damned the first night!!

Emery, Kemble, and others .- When Morton's style 'School of Reform' was accepted, Emery expected, on School of Reform' was accepted, Emery expected, on what grounds I know not, that John Kemble would act Lord Avondale, (a heavy, ineffective part, which poor Cooke, to whom it was assigned, could do nothing with.) After the great hit the comedian made in Tyke, he was accustomed to say that Kemble knew what was in him, and would not trust himself beside him. Once or twice publicly some ill-feeling was displayed by or twice publicly some ill-feeling was displayed by Kemble, which Emery resented wrathfully, and joined George Frederick Cooke in anathematizing 'Black Jack.' A conversation between Incledon, Emery, and Cooke, at the King's Head Inn, Holborn, I once heard, when every ill 'the drama is heir to' was attributed to the Apply at 13 Exchange st. great Coriolanus. From the Records of a Stage Veteran.

When Emery first came to London, his extreme simplicity and frankness of manner and his fine full dialect were glorious weapons in Suett's hands, who hoaxed the York laddie to the great delight of his brethren and "several persons of distinction." Unfortunately, many of Suett's stories are unprintable, and much that he told was a vast invention hung upon a slender thread of fact. One instance, however, I remember, from the pure simplicity of Emery's reply:—Some one had interested Emery very much respecting the dissipations of a gentleman, well known to each, whose father, a Yorkshire landholder, was averse to his son's dramatic notions; Emery followed the thread of the narrative, entering into the grief of the mother and the sister, till the narrator came to—"At last, Sir, the father said, 'Robert, your conduct will bring my grey hairs with sorrow to the grave." "That wean't do Mr.—"" said John."

The Daily Advertiser and Mob Law .- The Advertiser of yesterday, undertakes to deny the statement we made on Monday, that some of our underwriters had declined risks in New York, and that persons having goods there had ordered them away, fearing that riots and conflagrations might ensue at the coming elections, from the course pursued by the Bank partizans in that city. This denial, the Daily avers, is predicated on information derived from a gentleman very conversant with insurance business-we know the gentleman alluded to, an Insurance Broker, a violent federal politician-but even this broker admits the main facts of our statement, that large amounts for insurance were applied for and not taken-he denies our inference, and assigns his own reasons why the risks were not taken. He may think himself correct, but we see no reason to believe him.-In making our statement, we had not reference to applications made by him alone—there are other gentlemen who are sometimes employed to get insurance effected for New York merchants as well as him- James of the Gazette does not wish to quarrel, for he But notwithstanding this moving appeal, the watches the whole insurance business than he does the whole knowledge of the world. We made our statement understandingly, and in conformity to facts. We copy the following paragraph from the Daily, for the purpose simply of saying that it is not true :-

"If it should be said that the article of the Post was intended to refer to some other applications for insurance than those, the circumstances of which we have just stated, we reply, that the Presidents of all the insurance offices in this city declare, that they have received no other application, of the nature of those men-tioned by the Post."

In penning the paragraph on Monday, we had in view the interest of our citizens-we intended to convey to them information which we supposed would be useful to them. If they pront by it, it is well, it not, the loss will be their own. If any one doubts the correctness of our statement, that our insurance offices fear riots in New York, let him apply to them for insurance mults, as well as from other causes, and he will find course they have marked out, and which they followed gate there, and under cover of a political commotion, will fire the city for plunder. An unfortunate tailor, who had committed some law business to the hands of an attorney well practised in his profession, had a bill containing such a variety of charges that he thought himself fleeced most unmercifully. The only satisfaction which occurred to him was to prevail on the lawyer to have a suit of clothes made for him, for which he in his turn gave in something like the following bill:—

Scottish Aneedote, by the Ettrick Shepherd .- In Appin there is a public-house called Tigh-phort-na-To this house a "red-coat" came one day, and while taking his dram, entertained the landlord and a couple of his friends, with stories of battles, of imminent dangers, and hair-breadth escapes. He was asked the most revolting sight he had ever seen. He answered he had seen many, but the massacre of Glencoe beat them all! He there saw sixteen men bound hand and foot, placed side by side on a bench, and sixteen musket balls fired through their stout hearts. The landlord immediately beckoned out one of his friends. "My father," said he, "was one of those sixteen-the redcoat was one of his murderers. I am resolved to run him through with my dirk this instant." "Agreed, my brave Donald," said his neighbour, "but first let us hear more of his stories." They went in together, and the red-coat proceeded. "About dawn we were under orders to quit Glencoe; we heard the scream of a child a little way up the hill ; the Captain said to me, 'Go, Duncan, run that child through if it be a male, but if it he a female, spare it.' I climbed up and saw a decent looking woman with a blanket about her, and forcing a corper of it into the child's mouth to keep it from crying, to prevent discovery. My heart melted with pity; I went back, and though at the risk of my life, I told the Captain it was a female child." "I was that child," exclaimed the landlord, "that woman was my mother -often has she told me the tale with tears of gratitude But a moment ago I was resolved to slay you; but now put off that red coat, and be my son forever !"

In the spring of the year, every one is troubled more or less with a propensity to sleep, and by the use of this corrective it can be obviated entirely. For purifying and era Kealing all kinds of humors from the blood, even if they appear externally in the face, or any part of the body, it is much better and any more efficacious than any external application; in fact I selfow knew it to fail proving effectual. The patient will find it operates more in the blood than any other preparation they ever referred to; it is far better than salts, sulphur, crean tarter, or any other preparation of this kind, for when the blood is once purified with this corrective, it remains in an even temperature through the summer months. For a foul stomach, jaundice, general debility, weakness of limbs, want of appetite, billious and liver complaints, headach, stupor, &c. For the catarrh, which is generally occasioned by the impure state of the blood, there is nothing extant that has proved so efficacious as this purifying corrective. For all the above complaints it is seldom known to fall in proving an effectual remedy.

It is really worth the public attention, as every one is aware of the unpleasant, dull, heavy feeling, which the spring of the year produces; and by the use of this corrective, it can be obviated spairely. Every one who makes use of the above preparation, will be astonished at the mild and gentle effect it has on the blood.

This is to certify, that I have been troubled in the spring and summer seasons with a dull and stupid feeling, which very much troubled me while about my business, and by taking some of Warner's Purifying Powders, I have found it a perfect remedy, and with confidence recommend it to others who may be similarly affected.
